“Remina Two” marks BEA1991’s 15th release through BE.AWORLD, a container for unbridled self-releasing and pop autonomy since 2014.

Remina Two is the spontaneous extension of an earlier written track titled Remina One - a demo retrospectively acting as a mother, birthing a new song while staying behind as the observer.

“Remina” is the colloquial name for Rhea Silvia; a red-haired goddess who was one of the Vestal Virgins in early Rome. She bore two sons, Romulus and Remus, after being raped by the god Mars (!). She then notoriously flung herself into the Tiber River while her two sons, after being smuggled, were raised by a wolf who lost her cubs, and continued to found Rome.

A short visual story was shot to accompany the track in the Adriatic. We follow the character Remina as she, nude and persistent, continuously travels across land and sea, fighting entities which are never identified but ever present.

She lives in two worlds depicting a quantum physical-like reality where her fight to be left alone never ends - in either one. At the same time, there is a sense of equanimity and chosen vocation in both.

BEA1991 plays a “Dad Special” live show at Dekmantel Festival this Thursday, August 1st in Amsterdam.
